The Rainy Season is Here! Do You Have a Plan?

Although we live in sunny southern California, the winter months are upon us. With shorter daylight hours and unpredictable weather systems being prepared for unexpected winter weather is crucial. Winter storms can come on suddenly creating a higher level of risk for car accidents, hypothermia, frostbite, carbon monoxide poisoning, and heart attacks from overexertion.

FPEM reminds us that winter storms can move in quickly and bring a myriad of weather extremes from cold, freezing rain snow, or ice, and high winds. Along with these potentially harmful weather extremes results in heat, power, and communication systems can be down. Prepare for potential winter storms.
